

Hawai‘i State Department of Health
Disease Intervention Specialist (“DIS”) Training Services

SCOPE OF WORK

I. Introduction

The Hawai‘i State Department of Health (“DOH”), Harm Reduction Services Branch (“HRSB”) provides statewide leadership and coordination for the prevention, treatment, care and surveillance of infections transmitted primarily through sexual contact or injection drug use. This goal is facilitated by assuring the accessibility and delivery of client-centered, non-judgmental, and comprehensive services with the spirit of aloha and respect. Disease Intervention Specialists (“DIS”) play a critical role in HRSB services. Public health case investigations by DIS support core public health services by: confirming instances of HRSB state-reportable infections; facilitating and confirming timely treatment of these infections; using instances of confirmed infections to promptly elicit identifying and locating information for others subject to the same infections (case finding, source-spread dynamics); supporting contacts and associates to known infections toward appropriate health evaluation and treatments for themselves, limiting health harms within the community; and working with direct clients and community partners to increase awareness and actions that curtail these infections in Hawai‘i. Recent increases in syphilis infections among women of childbearing age correspond to an increased risk of congenital syphilis, with severe potential pregnancy outcomes, including miscarriage, stillbirth, or death shortly after birth. Congenital syphilis can have impacts on healthy-appearing children weeks to months after birth, causing developmental delays, hearing loss, vision abnormalities, and other neurological impairments. Effective DIS performance improves the quality of life by stopping preventable health harms, diminishing or averting intensive health care interventions, and fostering community collaborations that protect the public health from sexually transmitted infections.

HRSB is requesting proposals from qualified applicants to provide in-person DIS training services to HRSB personnel. Syphilis transmission from mother to infant (congenital syphilis), can be prevented with adequate prenatal care. Because late or no prenatal care is a frequent factor in congenital syphilis cases, and because preventing and treating syphilis before pregnancy can reduce congenital syphilis in the absence of adequate prenatal care, the services requested herein are especially to train DIS in the foundations of effective intervention services to reduce maternal syphilis and congenital syphilis statewide.
